FAMOUS JAPANESE PRINCE
IS DEAD AT TOKIO

Fifty Years Ago He Was the Defacto
Ruler of Japan.

[By Associated Press]
New York, November 22.—A Tokio cablegram today announced the death of Prince Keiki Tokugawa, the last of the Shoguns, who fifty years ago was the defacto ruler of Japan. When Tokugawa ruled it was a capital offense for common people to look a Shogun in the face, but with the birth of the new civilization in Japan Tokugawa became the most democratic of princes and rode a bicycle about the streets.

NOTICE! NOTICE! NOTICE!

How about those loved ones? Are they protected against the frown of the world in case you should be called by the Death Angel? If not, hasten and have them protected with a good insurance policy. The Modern order of Praetorians located at Dallas, Texas, writes the best policy written by any company doing business in Texas, with the easy monthly payment and give it a good accident feature with out any extra charge to you. They write a 10, 15 or 20 pay policy, and give it to you at exactly what it costs to carry the insurance on your life. Don't let your wife and children carry the risk, but let the Praetorians carry it for them. For rates and particulars, see me, I will be glad to meet you at your leisure, show and explain the plans of the Praetorians.

WEATHER FORECAST

Bryan, Tex., Nov. 22, 1913.
East Texas (Bryan): Tonight and Sunday unsettled; colder Sunday.

Weather Conditions.

The northwestern storm noted Thursday morning has continued to increase in energy and extends over the plains States and upper central valleys. It is causing high winds in the north-central States and has been attended by precipitation in the lake region, middle plains States, and Southwest. A second area of low pressure is moving in over the north-west and precipitation has been general in that district.
